FOREWORD

FROM THE VICE CHANCELLOR OF UNIMAP

Internationalization has emerged to be the trend not only in the business arena but also in education. Science and technology tend to change every now and then but universal core values and soft skills have remained constant.

This camp will provide the opportunity for participants to engage their leadership skills and work as a team player. Such values and skills will be honed in this camp. Team players and people who can endure even in difficult situations can be more productive and show a sense of leadership in the workplace.

UniMAP believes that effective communication and leadership skills can be the key to a good interpersonal relationship. Striking a balance between hard skills and soft skills plays a vital role in producing well-rounded individuals who are productive, efficient and effective in their work.

This camp opens up new opportunities for UniMAP to collaborate with other universities in the ASEAN region. I am pleased to see the biggest collaborations for ISOL with universities from Thailand including Hatyai University, Walailak University, Prince of Songkla University, as well as the Center of Islamic Studies from Prince of Songkla University.

Finally, allow me then to take this opportunity to congratulate all the staff and facilitators who have made this ISOL possible and all the participants of this camp. It is another breakthrough to the University's plan that by 2015, all Asian nations will join and work with us as a team in fully developing the soft skills and leadership competencies of students from different parts of the world.

Thank You.

INTRODUCTION AND OBJECTIVES

Recently, the lack of graduates who are competent in various skills is a major problem. The organizations which the graduates will work for also require them to possess various soft skills. Good and effective interpersonal and communication skills will help the graduates to carry themselves and to discharge their duties with confidence, consequently, make them more competitive and productive. Leadership is essential to move an organization to a level that can be proud of. Therefore, this camp will foster leadership skills among the participants to prepare them for the future career.

The importance of soft skills as distinct from hard skills or domain knowledge is increasingly being recognized in several sectors of today's highly competitive market place. The need to be able to clearly and concisely convey knowledge and expertise, demands the students to sharpen their soft skills and leadership abilities.

This camp requires the participants to converse in English language due to the differences between their native languages. It is also to improve their English language proficiency and boost up their level of confidence in communicating with others.

This camp is expected to produce competent participants especially in soft skills and leadership. Hence, the implementation of the International Leadership and Soft Skills Enhancement Camp 2012 is greatly hoped to be more rewarding experiences in churning out graduates who are well rounded and capable to rise to the challenge.

Objectives of the camp:

- Students will be able to practice English and leadership skills in real life situation.
- Provide exposure on leadership and soft skills to the students for the international level.
- Help in creating a prominent international visibility through strategic partnership between UniMAP and Universities from Southern Thailand.
