Title	The "International Relations" Of The Malay Peninsular From The Seventh To The Fourteenth Century

Volume	23
Issue/ Part	1983
Year	1983
Pagination	21-36
Abstract	As part of the Srivijayan empire from the seventh to the fourteenth century, Malaya experienced much diplomatic contact with other countries, especially China and India. These contacts were mainly economic in nature because Srivijaya was a maritime empire based on trade. Political, military and religious factors also influenced Malaya's diplomatic relations but they were usually subordinate to the economic reasons or closely related. Malaya's strategic location between China and India enhanced the importance of trade. Trades from the surrounding region congregated at Malayan ports which served as thriving emporia. Most of the ports as indicated by written sources and archaeological finds, were situated on the East Coast of Malaya. The importance of trade to Malaya was also reflected in matters of national interest and in the domestic and external factors that influenced Malaya's international relations-all these revolved around commercial reason.

Title	"What Are The Factors That Influence Experiences Of Job Satisfaction In Malaysian Working Mothers With Children Who Are Currently Resident In The UK?"
Year	2008
Type of Degree	M.Sc.
Keyword/ Subject	Working mothers zPsychology
Abstract	This research aims to explore the experiences of job satisfaction for working mothers. It uses a qualitative methodology, specifically with semi-structured interview to explore the views of three Malaysian working mothers with regard to their experiences of job satisfaction and family commitments. The value of this research includes its provision of new insight into the satisfaction felt by working mothers. In conclusion the results found the both the family and the organization appear to be important and both heavily influence the sens of satisfaction felt by a working mother.
